Our County Roads. Editors Daily Dispatch: Gentlemen.—
Being a constant reader of your valuable paper—the pioneer of old Virginia—my sttention was drawn to an article about our county roads. I did not know that there existed a farmers' club in the county. I see that the subject was brought before said club for discussion. You are right, gentlemen, when you say that our roads are abominable. They are nothing else than mud canais. The present read law is worse than no law. The Farmers' Club has made a move in the right direction when it is proposed to get the assistance of convict ed possible. labor to work on the roads. In the present condition of the roads the farmer never will be able to improve his lands. Therefore, gentlemen, give them your valuable aid. Let the city and county come to the rescue. and something will be done. The farmer will then come to the city to take away the filth and give in return good and wholesome food. What a blessing it would be to the farmer and comfort to the people of your city when teams can be driven upon the county roads without being mired to the The Farmers' Club and you have made the move. Keep the fever up. The people will do their duty. The condition that the roads are in is a disgrace to the county. We see from year to year that we are doing a down-hill business. We are taking everything from the land and cannot return the necessary element. The very life of the soil is being emptied into the river. Let us have good roads, and then where you now see nothing but poverty.

grass, broom-straw, and sassafras bushes growing, you will see the land bearing fine crops. Strangers will then come and settle amongst us; and not until something is done to the roads will they ever be induced to purchase land and settle among us.

" Rulldoze,

We observe that many of our contemporaries got the word bulldozed into their dispatches and editorials as "bulldogged." We gave the etymology of the word a few months ago. It is a Louisiana word of negro parentage. Last spring in the parishes of East and West Feliciana and East Baton Rouge large numbers of negroes began to join the Democratic party. The Republican leaders determined to put a stop to it, and formed secret societies for the purpose of whipping in the backsliding negroes. Among these was the famous "Union Rights Stop" at Mount Pleasant, on the river, which caused so much trouble, and was finally broken up by the sheriff, when their oaths, by-laws, and list of members were captured. Their plan of action was to spot a colored man who was suspected of Democratic proclivities, then to serve a notice on him to come to a certain point and take the oath of the brethren of the Union Rights Stop. If he did not come We gave the etymology of the word a few they served a second notice, then a third with a threat, and if he still refused, a detachment of the brethren was sent after him at night, and he was brought in tied and hand-cuffed. He was then told to sign the Stop and take the oath, Usually terror made him comply, but if he refused he was put uown and whipped with a bull-whip until he consented to join the league or leave the State. In very obstinate cases the brethren were in the habit of administering a bull's dose of several hundred lashes on the state. When a deling with these who ing a bull's dose of several hundred lashes on the bare back. When dealing with those who were hard to convert, active members would call out "give me the whip, and let me give him a bull-dose." From this it became easy to say "that fellow ought to be bulldosed, or bulldozed," and soon bulldoze, bulldozing, and bulldozers came to be slang words. After the exposure of the Union Rights Stop the Republicans of this State sought to turn the force of the exposure by applying the term to all sorts of intimidation. Hence, when they say that they mean to exclude the "bulldozed parishes" it simply means parishes where intimidation is alleged to have occurred .- New Orleans

Moncure D. Conway on the Jennings

[London letter, October 28th, in the Cincinnati Commercial.] I once heard George Peabody say that for many years he had been bored with letters from America, asking him about visionary estates, falling to more visionary heirs in the United States; and even so humble an individual as your correspondent has received enough letters about the Jennings estate to yield him a glow of satisfaction in recording the prospect that the famous case has at last reached a situation in which the door will speedily be shut against any future inquirers. The High Court of Chancery will soon have the case in hand. The Jenningses, to the number of several hundred, have formed a huge "family association"—a sort of joint stock company—with treasurers and secretaries. company-with treasurers and secretaries, and have issued a "memorial for public information." In this actualization of Dickens's Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce the title is Jennens vs. Jennens; but I believe that the various ways in which the name "Jennens" can be written when there are millions in it are more than might be imagined. Many a family that once upon a time concluded that "Jennings" or "Jennens" was plebeian as compared with Jenying, Jenyns, Janning, seems to have discovered in recent years a more aristocratic accent in Jennings and Jennens. There never were such a number of Jenningses in London as at present, no fewer than ninety-six persons of that name being on the directory. The property represents forty millions of golden dollars, and the holders of tickets that may draw prizes are beginning, it is said, to speculate in them. The old man who left the original property points unusually well the saying, "He heapeth up riches and knoweth not who shall gather them." He was god-son of William III., and page to the first Hanoverian King; a miser, he died in lonely bachelorhood, and an unsigned will was found in his pocket. Large sums of money were found hidden away in all manner of magple places about his house. The sum he left to be fought over was two millions of pounds, and it has now become

The matter has gone now so far that some notices of ejectment from the property have been served, and the conflict begun a century back, waged since in a ghostly way, M. D. C. will soon grow warm.

A recent discovery by Colonel Gordon gives hope that water communication may be established between Lake Albert Nyanza and Khartoum. This would open the interior to trade to an extent no one has deem-
